THE SPANISH CROWN.

Affairs in Spain are again becoming interesting. After an interregnum of over eighteen months, the question of who shall be the future sovereign of that country appears to be at length approaching a solution. Several candidates for the vacant throne have been from time to time named, and intrigue has doubtless been extensively resorted to in the interests of the different parties and factions. The final struggle now seems to be at hand, the Cortes having resolved upon proceeding at once with the election of a king. From the resolution adopted by that body on Friday last, it will be seen that the successful candidate must receive a majority equal to one-half the entire number of the deputies; and this it is considered, shuts off the Duke de Montpensier from all chances of obtaining the crown. The choice will, in all probability, lie between the regent Serrano and Espartero. Should either of these be selected, Europe will have another parvenu added to the list of her royal rulers. The plan of taking monarchs from the ranks of the people helps in hastening the period when the people will govern themselves on genuine democratic principles. At any rate, this election will give the coup de grace to Bourbonism, that monstrous birth of an age of royal tyranny; and will thus further the cause of popular liberty in the Old World.

ENGLISH AID FOR CUBA.

Late advices from Havana inform us that the patriots are expecting several war steamers from England for service off the coast of Cuba. Whether there is any truth in the statement remains to be seen, but we shall not be surprised if the Cubans succeed in getting help of this kind from the other side of the Atlantic. Thanks to the vigilance of Secretary Fish in the interests of Spain, all the efforts of these people to obtain assistance from the United States have been defeated. Expedition after expedition has been got up here destined for Cuba, but they have moved only to be intercepted by the Federal authorities and broken up. Our Government has allowed a fleet of Spanish gunboats, built in American shipyards, equipped in this country, and expressly intended to operate against the Cuban insurgents, to leave our shores; but whenever it has had the slightest intimations of preparations for sending all to the patriots in the field, it has immediately upset every project. Has it come to this that a people struggling for their liberties might expect more sympathy and countenance in aristocratic England than in democratic America? Has Congress spirit enough to interfere and save the country from this disgrace?

THE EFFECT PRODUCED.

The brutal treatment of Chinese laborers in California is producing its legitimate fruits. The San Francisco agencies under whose auspices Chinese emigration has been effected have issued and sent to China circulars advising their countrymen against further emigration to our shores. It sets forth that the Chinese are not respected nor granted equal rights by the white race, but are put on a level with horses and dogs; that they are insulted and abused; that they are in constant danger of being robbed and driven away from their work; that they can find no protection in the courts, and that facilities for money-making in California are fewer than formerly. The completion of the Pacific railroad threw five thousand of them out of employment, and the number since employed on other roads is more than offset by fresh arrivals. It seems to be the general impression that Mongolian immigration has practically ended for the present.

A NOVEL CLAIM.

An audacious spinner has turned up in Washington as a claimant for compensation for planning the Tennessee river campaign. She protests that the government adopted her plan—used her brains, and should not now hesitate to "make her comfortable." On the other hand General Logan, chairman of the committee on Military Affairs, who happens to know something about the campaign, says that President Lincoln planned the campaign; that he showed to Logan, long before the beginning of the campaign, plans and maps and figures, and the whole campaign as it was subsequently conducted, with the roads and streams and bridges, and everything plainly marked out. We shall not be surprised, however, if the spinner carries her point. It will be a great deal in her favor if she happens to be pretty.

TO BE RECONSTRUCTED.

It is expected that at the next meeting of the Committee on Reconstruction, legislation will be proposed concerning the State of Tennessee. Representatives Maynard and Stokes and other prominent Radicals who oppose the present condition of affairs, ask that Congress pass a law declaring that the Legislature is an illegal body, as (they claim) the majority of its members were elected against the provisions of the constitution, blanks with signatures being often circulated by wholesalers and filled with names of persons who were excluded from voting by reason of their connection with the rebellion.

The number of Sunday Schools in the State of Illinois is 1,467; the number of officers and teachers attached to them, 46,450; scholars, 322,247; volumes in school libraries, 406,875; and the amount expended during the past year for benevolent and other purposes, $150,000. The number of county organizations in the State is ninety.

OREGON GONE DEMOCRATIC AGAIN.

The returns received from Oregon, yesterday evening, indicated a sweeping Democratic victory. Grover, Democratic candidate for Governor, is believed to be elected by 800 majority. The Democrats will have a majority in the Legislature.

Captain Eyre, by whose reckless inhumanity or stupidity, it matters not which, the whole crew of the Oneida was sent to the bottom, thought it cruel that he was punished by six months' "leave of absence"—for that, after all, was the amount of his sentence. He has been appealing against it, therefore, ever since, and finally induced the directors of the company to which his steamer belonged to say a good word for him, in an address to the Lords of the Admiralty, through the Board of Trade. The Board of Trade replied to Mr. Eyre that his sentence, "so far from being too severe, is more lenient than the gravity of the offence required." Eyre will understand, therefore, by this time, that he did not perform an altogether praiseworthy act in "cutting down a damned Yankee frigate."

Old Jesse Grant, the postmaster at Covington, Kentucky, who is the father-in-law of Kramer, came to Washington some three weeks ago to effect his advancement. He reported his ineffectual effort in this wise: "I told 'Lysses that he must pine Kramer to one of them seventy-five hundred dollar missions; but 'Lysses told me he didn't like to do it, because the papers made so much talk about pitting his relations to office. Then I up and tells 'Lysses," says the venerable P. M., "I've got about $25,000 salted down, which I expect to leave behind me; and if you don't give Kramer one of them seventy-five hundred dollar missions I'll leave the whole of it to Kramer's wife, and won't leave you any."

Everybody will understand the story about a first-class power offering over two millions for Samana bay. It is the same kind of diplomacy that induced the girl to write to her dilatory lover: "Dear Bill—if you want me you had better come and marry me right away; Sam Price, the butcher, says he loves me awfully, and I can't hold out much longer."

It is necessary to credit the following "mean thing" to the Chicago Times:

If Cleveland, Ohio, could get up a baseball club whose play would be in the inverse ratio to the amount of some possessed by the Cleveland newspapers, it would have more playing ability than any dozen clubs in existence.
